Nicolas Fulpius set to join the board of Romande Energie Holding SA

Nicolas Fulpius (47), CEO and co-founder of Ansam Group (CH) and a director of various other companies, is poised to join the Board of Directors of Romande Energie Holding SA, in place of outgoing member Jean-Jacques Miauton. His appointment will be voted on at the next Annual General Meeting.

Nicolas has wide-ranging experience in developing and implementing innovation and high-growth strategies. The Board of Directors believes that he has the ideal background and personal qualities to strengthen the leadership of Romande Energie Holding in the wake of Jean-Jacques Miauton's forthcoming departure. Nicolas is a seasoned professional in the digital and ICT industries, who has spent time working in Silicon Valley. Furthermore, he sits on several boards and is heavily involved in greentech and the circular economy. His expertise and energy is expected to make a real difference within Romande Energie.

Furthermore, he has a keen interest in the energy industry and sustainability themes in general. If elected, Nicolas would seek to help drive the shift towards cleaner energy by helping to further Romande Energie's ambitions in these areas. He also plans to take the Group's expertise to the next level in digital technology and innovation, which will become vital areas for its business.

The Annual General Meeting of Romande Energie Holding will consider this appointment.
